PENLAND COMPANY FIRE LOSS.

Barn and All Contents Except Horses, Burned.

A big hay barn and stock shed belonging to the Penland Land & Livestock company, on what is known as the Hamilton place, 25 miles southwest of Heppner, was destroyed by fire yesterday evening, says the Heppner Gazette.

The fire started from the explosion of a lantern.

One hundred tons of wheat hay was burned. The loss is about $2000.

C. A. Minor, manager of the Penland Land & Livestock company, returned from the scene of the fire and stated that the barn burned was a new structure having just been finished. Besides containing about 120 tons of choice wheat hay that had been bound in bundles, there was a new twine binder, two seeders, new buggy, about $500 worth of harness, several saddles, besides the bedding of a threshing crew.

Fortunately there were about 15 men at the place at the time of the fire, and all made a run for the horses. They hardly had time to get the animals out.

REPLANT FORESTS

MOUNTAINS CAN BE COVERED WITH TIMBER AGAIN.

Forestry Department Making Efforts to Reforest Denuded Mountain Tops —Over 900 Acres of Denuded Forest Land Near Helena is Being Planted —Expert at Boise Says if People Will Secure Suitable Tracts the Government Will Experiment.

One of the vital phases of the forestry question is as to whether the forestry department can reforest the denuded mountains.

It is possible to secure a growth of timber on the high mountains which have been stripped by the sawmills?

This question was discussed by the forestry officials at length at the Boise irrigation congress, and the following from the Boise Statesman gives some light upon it. The Statesman says:

Among the members of the forest service, who have been visiting Boise during the meeting of the congress, is Ernest A. Sterling, who is attached to the department of forest reproduction. He is at work in this state laying out the work in his branch.

One feature of the work to be done is an examination of the Boise-Payette project region for the purpose of determining what trees can be planted to the greatest advantage by settlers.

The service has selected a site for a large nursery in the newly-created Baer reserve and is looking for another in this portion of the state. In these nurseries trees will be propagated to be set out where needed. Within a year the two nurseries will be started. It is also intended to start a small nursery wherever a permanent headquarters for rangers shall be established in a reserve.

The seedlings will be planted, first, on denuded watersheds; second, on old burns; third, on land that has been cut over and natural production is deficient.

In these ways it is proposed to do something for the reserve states in addition to the great work protecting existing forests and conserving the water supply.

Mr. Sterling was asked yesterday whether the service could, in his opinion, start a forest growth on the hills about Boise. He gave it as his opinion that there would be no difficulty in doing so.

Where citizens should take the initiative the service would co-operate with them in such matters. At Helena, for instance, a tract of 900 acres was being planted with forest trees. The land had been secured by the citizens and the forest service was assisting them. That land, Mr. Sterling added, was just such hills as those back of Boise.

STATE ENGINEERS MEET.

Law for Montana Formulated—Officers Elected for Next Year.

The State Engineers' association held its final meeting at the close of the irrigation congress, says the Boise Statesman. The principal work done was to help frame an irrigation code for Montana for presentation to the next session of that state's legislature. The code was framed on the board lines resembling those of Idaho and Montana. Officers were elected as follows: James Stephenson, Jr., of Idaho, president; Clarence C. Johnson of Wyoming, secretary.

There were present at the meeting J. W. Wade of Montana, A. L. Fellows of North Dakota, S. H. Lea of South Dakota, T. W. Jhycox of Colorado, Henry Turtell of Nevada, J. H. Lewis of Oregon, Caleb Tanner, Jr., of Utah, James Stephenson, Jr., of Idaho, and former State Engineers of Colorado J. S. Green and J. E. Field.

The next meeting will be held the second Monday in March at Reno, Nev.

PRAISES PENDLETON.

Frank Reese Tells of the Good Effects of Paving.

Frank Reese, Walla Walla representative of the Warren Construction company, arrived in the city this morning from a business trip to Portland, Boise City and Pendleton, says the Walla Walla Statesman. In the two latter places the Warren company has extensive paving contracts which it is now at work upon.

"Both Boise and Pendleton are rapidly forcing to the front and the business men told me they were expecting a big fall trade," said Mr. Reese this morning. "Boise entertained the National Irrigation congress last week in royal style and it will prove a big advertisement for that part of Idaho. Delegates from all over the United States were in attendance and the Boise people fairly outdid themselves in entertaining the visitors.

"Business seems good in Pendleton. Umatilla county harvested a big wheat crop again this year and in consequence trade in all lines is good. We are getting along nicely with out pay-
